LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Mrs. Peter Is Very Mysterious.

A mystery is oft perplexing. And sometimes proves to be most vexing. —Peter Rabbit.

Jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had just begun his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky as Peter Rabbit approached the dear Old Briar-patch. Peter was acting rather queerly. Every few steps he stopped and studied the dear Old Briar-patch. Had you been there you might have thought from Peter's actions that he suspected an enemy might be in hiding there waiting for him. Certainly Peter acted as if he were afraid.

The truth is, Peter was afraid. He wasn't afraid of an enemy. No, it wasn't that. But, just the same, Peter was afraid. Peter was afraid to go home. You see, Peter had been gone two whole days and nights, and he had a very guilty feeling. A guilty feeling, you know, will make even the bravest afraid. Peter was afraid to face Mrs. Peter.

Instead of hopping boldly in along one of his private little paths cut through the brambles of the dear Old Briar-patch, he fidgeted about. He hopped over to a patch of sweet clover and tried to eat some. But somehow he had no appetite for sweet clover. Every minute or so he turned to sniff Mrs. Peter was about. All the time he was trying to think of a really good excuse to offer Mrs. Peter.

Peter knew that he richly deserved all the sharp things little Mrs. Peter could say. He knew that nothing could excuse him for leaving Mrs. Peter to worry alone there in the dear Old Briar-patch for so long. He knew that it was his own selfishness, his pure selfishness, that had kept him away so long. He had stayed because he had been having a good time.

But though Peter didn't appear, after a while Peter began to worry. Could it be that something dreadful had happened to little Mrs. Peter while he had been away? Could it be that she had grown so lonely, so left alone and had gone back to her old home up in the Old Pasture, where he had first met her as Miss Fuzztail? Could it be that he would have to live alone in the dear Old Briar-patch? Peter doesn't often worry, but he worried now. Pretty soon the fear that he might not find little Mrs. Peter became greater than the fear of her sharp tongue. Peter turned and hurried into the dear Old Briar-patch.

Now, little Mrs. Peter had certain favorite places where she liked to sit in the dear Old Briar-patch. Peter hurried from one to another of these favorite places, but nowhere did he find so much as a trace of little Mrs. Peter.

"OH, PETER!" SHE CRIED. "OH, PETER! I'VE GOT SOMETHING TO SHOW YOU."

Peter. By this time he was sure that the worst had happened. He forgot all his guilty feelings. He had just one thought and that was to find Mrs. Peter. And so he rushed about through the dear Old Briar-patch in quite a crazy way.

All of a sudden, in a part of the dear Old Briar-patch which Peter and Mrs. Peter seldom visited, Mrs. Peter stepped out from behind a bramble-bush. At sight of her all Peter's worries left him. It was such a relief to see her that he felt quite willing to listen to all the sharp things she would say. But little Mrs. Peter didn't say any sharp things. She didn't even ask him where he had been. Her eyes were shining with the softest, loveliest light in the world. "Oh, Peter!" she cried. "Oh, Peter! I've got something to show you, but don't make a bit of noise. Don't make the tiniest, weakest bit of noise. Wait here just a minute, and then I'll show you what I've got."

Peter sat down and blinked. What did this mean? Mrs. Peter was very mysterious; he simply didn't understand her at all.

Severe Storm Sweeps Over Prince William County, With Loss.

MANASSAS, Va., July 26 (Special).—A severe wind and electric storm swept over Prince William county Saturday afternoon and evening, resulting in heavy damage to growing crops and loss of thousands of dollars' worth of live stock.

On the farm of McDunn Green, near Haymarket, forty-one miles from Manassas, nine head of cattle were killed by lightning out of a herd of twenty-five. Wallace Wood, living south of Manassas, lost two valuable horses, killed by lightning.

Four miles north of Manassas the storm assumed gigantic proportions. At Ben Leonard farm, in that vicinity, nineteen large shade trees, surrounding the main farm dwelling, were uprooted, and many smaller trees were twisted and broken off. The farm buildings were not seriously damaged. No loss of life or serious injury to persons has been reported.
